Not illustrated. 1883 Excerpt: .way to Foundry Street, and instituted some inquiries about the young factory girl. Everything she heard raised the girl in her estimation, and when at length she found herself in the presence of Emily herself, in that neat, bright-windowed little parlour, her favour was quite secured, and she made her offer of a pleasant home and kind friends. Do you accept my offer, Emily Smith? asked the lady kindly. I think you will certainly be happy with us. If you please, ma am, said Milly, with a full heart; and then the lady left, and Emily Smith fell on her knees beside her little bed, and thanked God for His mercy to her. You may be quite sure that the good old Granny was not forgotten in her new time of comfort. Ay me, the difference I discern! How often shall her old fireside Be cheered with tidings of the bride, How often she herself return, And tell them all they would have told, And bring her babe, and make her boast, Till even those that miss d her most, Shall count new things as dear as old: But thou and I have shaken hands, Till growing winters lay me low; My paths are in the fields I know, And thine in undiscover d lands. -- In Memoriam. CHAPTER I. GOING ABROAD. vOOM--boom--boom! Only once in my life, to my knowledge, have I heard that awful sound, spite of the wild roar and scream of wind...
