I do not understand. Well, you are not responsible, but, I can find as many veterans as you need. Ask the Vietnam Veterans of America. They will give you their list of members and you can start the study, right How many members do you have, Rick EIDMAN Mr. W. Sixty-two thousand. HAIRMAN The C. I can find them in 5 minutes so I do not know why the VA has so much trouble. This idea that the study cant start until 2014 is because they are having a study of how to do the study. This is just ridiculous. I think we should end it all and just give everybody their benefits. Mr. W. And I am just reporting what VA told us. ILLIAMSON Well, the majority of researchers and methodologists that we con-tacted within and outside of VA said that while locating partici-pants from the first study is a formidable challenge, it is doable. They offered a number of suggestions such as data sources and methods that could be used. Another challenge involves gaining consent from prospective par-ticipants. Virtually all researchers and methodologists we contacted thought it was important that NVVLS participants receive assur-ances of confidentiality as a condition of participating. However, VA has not yet given such assurances and plans to take possession of all data including data identifying participants at the conclusion of the study. VA officials said that participation...
