Not illustrated. 1918 Excerpt: .a member, the Roman Catholic child is insured attendance at mass and the Protestant child forms the habit of churchgoing. In the work of general moral instruction (here seems less difficulty, when it is wisely planned for. We are ready to grant that there is much that is quite worth while in a general chapel service, but we do question whether that good is not more than compensated by the loss. How can it be possible to plan a service which shall suit primary and high school grades ; This is never attempted in public schools where the fuller understanding of English greatly lessens the difficulty. Is it not a wiser plan to have each teacher give religious instruction to her own class each morning, with a separate chapel service for each department on Sunday? What shall we use as the basis for the daily religious...
