Five lots of fifty grams each of liver pulp were also used in this experiment (a) gave 0.589 gram of dextrose. (6) 0.266 (c) 0.179 (d) 0.415 (e) 0.368 By consulting experiments (1) and (2), it is seen: that calcium chloride has a retarding action on the decomposition of the glycogen into dextrose; that sodium citrate has a stimulating action on the rate of transformation; and that increasing the amount of dextrose also retards the rate of transformation. This latter fact well illustrates that in chemical and enzymatic reactions the heaping up of the products of the decomposition retards the rate of the decomposition. B. Perfusion Experiments. Experiment S. This experiment is to show the effect on the rate of transformation of glycogen into dextrose, by perfusing calcium chloride through the liver (1 sodium chloride was used as a control, instead of distilled water). In these experiments, instead of grinding the liver and adding the solutions to this pulp, the liver was perfused with the solutions to be tested. Canula! were inserted into the branches of the portal vein, through which the solutions were passed. The outlet was through a canula inserted in the vena cava inferior. The animal was killed by bleeding, and with the liver in situ, the canula; were inserted into the vessels. The vessels of one lobe were ligatured, the lobe cut..
